Special to The Constitution. WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 22. President Roosevelt told a press conference here today that Georgia was the only state in the Union which had failed to co-operate with the federal government on public works.

As a result, he added, the state which he often refers to as his second home, will not receive another red cent of federal funds unless it co-operates with the government.

(In this connection, it was generally believed that the state constitution must be amended to permit the state to borrow directly from New Deal agencies, as do other states. Senator Paul Lindsay, last night, however, contended it was not necessary.

Rivers Unavailable. (In Atlanta, Governor Rivers was unavailable for comment on the President's statement.) Mr. Roosevelt also made it clear that the loan and grant for construction of a hospital for the insane at Milledgeville was the last federal fund for Georgia unless the state revised its present policy. Senate Committee Hears Industrialists in Probe of 'Incentive' Benefits.

Testifying before a senate comexemptions to companies which share profits with their employes, he said:

Verity, who said his company offered its employes and management a variety of "incentives" in the form of profit-sharing, was one of four witnesses who testi-

Memory Wizard Says He Does It With Six Rules

Ability to remember names is distinct asset to businessmen, B. M. Wooding, memory expert, told members of the Atlanta Exchange the Steuben County State Bank Club yesterday.

Memory can be developed by the application of six simple laws, Wooding said. They are the laws of interest, attention, observation, and remained inside for about visualization or making a mental picture, association of ideas and repetition.

"Few people realize that memory can be developed," he said, "but with the strict application of these laws it is possible for one to improve considerably. Remembering names is one of the most neglected phases. Eighty-seven per cent of the things you remember come from actual sight. Therefore, it is important to practice making mental pictures."

The expert demonstrated his ability by distributing the sheets of a magazine and then recalling what was on each page. He also recited a series of approximately 150 numbers after they had been written on a blackboard.

Many More Voters Believe Republicans Will Win in 1940; Psychology Plays Major Role.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion. NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Repub-lican successes in the recent elec-tion have brought about a striking increase in the number of voters who think the G. O. P. will win the presidency in 1940. Nation-wide surveys taken by the Institute twice in the past year and repeated again today show that belief in a Republican victory has grown to the point where one-half of the voters, including a sizable number of Democrats, now think the G. O. P.

will carry the country in 1940.

A year ago less than one-third of the voters had any such faith in a Republican comeback.

The Institute's surveys, taken in September, 1937, April, 1938, and today, asked voters the question: "Which party do you think will win the presidential election in 1940—Democratic, Republican, Socialist or some other party?"

A trend is clearly evident in the following comparison of the re-

Mulkey contended he was assaulted and permanently injured by Griffith, acting as an employe of the construction company.

The petitioner claimed that in hitting him on the head with a clawhammer, Griffith was carrying out company instructions keep persons away from a building being repaired.

The court held that Mulkey failed to prove his case as laid and that the evidence indicated he ent back to the scene where Griffith was working after he had safely passed the hazardous area.

Judge Nash Broyles cited from a former court decision which said: "If a servant steps aside from his master's business to do an act entirely disconnected from it and injury results to another from such independent voluntary act the servant may be liable, but the master is not liable."

READY FOR CHRISTMAS.

In so far as gifts go, it appears that Georgia and Georgians are all set, already, to make the coming Christmas one of the grandest and most satisfactory in a decade or more.

Retail merchants who, motivated by that sensitive financial nerve, keep ears closer to the ground than most any other folks, have proved already their belief in an unusually active Christmas trade by the way they have increased their stocks and loaded their shelves with special holiday wares. The average merchant does not splurge in the wholesale market, as Georgia merchants have done this year, unless he has excellent grounds to believe his own customers will quickly clear those shelves and leave him a profit balance on his books for

The reason for this enhanced confidence is not far to seek. Georgia is moving on a new wave of plenty, not yet riding the crest, but mounting steadily upward on the economic graph. Industry in the state has enjoyed new activity in recent months and every added dollar to the pay rolls of Georgia workers is one more dollar to be spent over the counters of the state's retail stores.

Farmers, perhaps, have not enjoyed, as a whole, an exceptionally large cash income, this year. Cotton prices have been disappointing, but the tobacco crop, sold at satisfactory prices, has partially made up for this. And those crops which do not bring actual cash to the pockets of their growers, but which count heavily in the picture nevertheless, have increased this year beyond the past. The farmer who raises his own foods and supplies, instead of buying them. leaves his cash crop income for other purchases. Thus, this year, while total farm income may not have broken any records, there is a greater amount of spendable income among the farm

It is time we began that counting of the days to go before Christmas dawns. For the time is not too long, when it is remembered all of us have to visit the stores and buy those gifts the giving of which provides the greatest Yule-

And we can, as indicated above, enjoy this coming Christmas with the gratifying knowledge the year it brings so near an end has been one which has witnessed a real advance in Georgia's economics, one which has brought measurably nearer that time when this state can no longer be depicted as a region of lagging incomes and financial problems severe enough to concern all the rest of the nation.

OURSELVES TO BLAME.

Georgia has received, in 1938 Public Works Administration allotments, a total of $9,809,127, considerably less than her equitable share of the federal funds expended through this agency. This state, based upon population and need of employment, should have received $14,118,000 to stand on equal footing with the rest of the

This simply means that money collected in Georgia, as federal taxes, is being spent in other states which have been wise enough to take advantage of PWA opportunities and to get as much as possible of the funds.

Yet Georgians can only count themselves to blame for this diversion of Georgia tax moneys into projects of other states. For, if this state and its people had been alert enough to accept the proffered grants and loans, the total would have exceeded, instead of falling short of, the rightful share.

Atlanta and Fulton county are perhaps more to blame than any other governmental divisions of the state. If this city and county had voted in favor of the recently proposed bond issues, instead of defeating them by lack of sufficient votes at the polls, the difference between the amount allotted to Georgia by PWA and the amount fair to this state, would have been more than made up.

Other local communities in the state failed to provide the money, through bonds or otherwise, needed to secure proffered PWA grants

Thus, whether or not the system of matching federal funds with local moneys is approved by the individual, it must be remembered that Georgia had the chance to secure far more than she did, from this source, on the same terms accepted in other states. This state, particularly the voters of Atlanta and Fulton county, will have no logical ground for future complaint that it did not get its proper share of the 1938 expenditures by this branch of federal government activities.

CAREER MEN NEEDED

The rather remarkable study of the New Deal 400 by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, concluded in last week's Saturday Evening Post, forces into bold relief the Achilles heel of that governmental structure which spurred growth of the coterie placed under the microscope by the commentators.

The series stresses through its background pattern that, for the first time in many regimes, there has been provided a strong administrative government. It has not disintegrated under pressure as did the willy-nilly structure of the Hoover establishment.

The Post, in an editorial, takes cognizance of this concentration and centers its comment about this statement:

The inadequacies of the White House establishment leaves no one to write speeches or draft bills, to do the routine watching of great measures in congress, to patch up minor quarrels among agencies, advise on subordinate personnel, to perform several other subsidiary functions which the President must delegate if he is to get through his day's work.

The authors of "We Shall Make America Over" omit saying, the Post comments, that "our system of government provides for the election of congressmen and senators and the appointment of cabinet officers to do the work described" If the work is not done by these men, the Post asserts, "then today we have government by 'the White House establishment' and not the kind of government we think we

What the Post, in its turn, omits to say is that the regular establishment it would have doing the work of the New Dealers is a politically appointed body of men interested not so much in the advancement of government or of the individual citizens, but intent on the preservation of a status quo which in its turn will preserve their sinecures. In this, the Roosevelt government is, in a measure, no different from its predecessors. It was born of politics and of necessity paid its debt to politics. The payment is reflected in the several notably weak departments headed by political deadheads whom even Roosevelt has not been able to re-

The concentration of power at which the Post looks askance would not have been necessary had governments in the past been more interested in providing an adequate and efficient administrative service rather than the preservation of a politics-ridden bureaucracy. In time of necessity the President was forced to supply a substitute for a career service which congresses had neglected to build. It follows, then, that if a reshuffle of the cards is due at the White House, then another and equally stringent reshuffle is overdue in congressional halls.

In the New Dealers the government has been provided something that has the trappings of a career establishment. Yet the accident of its birth and its imperviousness to patronage control forced it into a fight for preservation which may prove disastrous not only to the 400, but to the ideals they represent. That descent to politics was unfortunate in that it attempted to circumvent a democratic process. A true career service would not have been so

The Post in a succeeding editorial criticizes the copying of foreign ideas, yet one which would eliminate the condition of which they complain in the New Deal structure is that of the civil service of Great Britain. There, an able administrative personnel has been built up and retained. This is only partially true in the civil service of this country and certainly not true in the appointive posts. It is not alone the New Dealers who require examination. The new congress might well look into the mirror, determining whether or not its ever-growing grab for pap and patronage is not of greater danger to the Democratic structure than these New Dealers.

MUCH MORE THAN TRADE

(From The Washington Post.)
"It must be increasingly apparent," said the Canadian prime minister, on the occasion of the signing of the new trade agreements, "that the stability of the civilization we cherish depends more than ever on the friendly association of the great English-speaking nations of the Old World

Until recently it was an open question as to whether or not the principle of relatively unrestricted trade between nations would win out over the hostile theory of governmental barter. Through the gap between the British system and that initiated by the United States the German principles were making substantial headway. This this disproportion is enormous The disproportion means that very great pressure will immediately begin to operate on Germany, on Italy and on Japan, to modify their barter systems. The alternative is a progressive loss of markets to countries within the new Anglo-American commercial orbit. This threat is very real, particularly for Germany. For that country produces nothing which cannot be equally well btained elsewhere. And increasing loss of markets would constitute a terrible problem for the already overstrained German economy Confronted with the new Anglo-American trade policy, Germany must pursue one of two general alternatives. She must either take steps profoundly to modify the program of autarchy, on which the power of the Nazi regime has been largely built, or she must proceed to dominate force markets which will tend to contract for her

There is the keenest anxiety to help Germany to regain her rightful place as a great commercial nation, animated by liberal motives and released from the perpetual nightmare of her

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

U. S. "ON THE LIST" WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 .- Nothing is more stupid or more harmful than alarmist discussion of foreign affairs. Yet the fact should be faced —the new orientation of American foreign policy is squarely founded on the conviction that "we're on the list." The phrase was used in all seriousness, the other day, by an exceedingly self-contained shaper of America's course abroad. And his simple meaning was that a time would come when this country would have to knuckle under to the German Reich, or force the Reich to knuckle under.

For the sake of honest realism, it must be stated: War is what is feared. Not war now, or even five years from now, but at the moment when the power of Hitler Germany grows so great that the world cannot hold two such nations, of such vitality and such divergent interests, as Nazidom and the United States. Perhaps that moment may never come, yet again, for honest realism's sake it must be stated: The best State Department opinion looks for no real check in the growth of German power until the point of German-American conflict is reached. The fact is ugly and half-in-credible, but, once it is grasped, the post-Munich happenings in Washington become comprehensible.

The mere fear of an international face-making contest over South American trade was never enough to explain the vast new armament program, the President's sterner and more daring atti-tude toward Germany, and all the rest. The fear of eventual war does explain these events, and, when you ponder the smallness of the modern earth, the international character of modern trade, and the ungovernable dynamism of the Nazi state, you will see why the fear of eventual war is reasonable, however broad the Atlantic ocean happens to be.

AMERICA INTERVENES Hitherto, the career officers of the State Department have been the guardians of the isolationist spirit among the makers of American foreign policy. Trained to regard only the practical interests of their country and to ignore moral issues, convinced by long experience that the people are fundamentally isolationist, the high career men of the department advocated great restraint in dealing with the Fascist nations. Empty gestures of defiance or disapproval, however brutal the Fascist provocation, were always opposed by the career men. As a consequence, liberal critics, who have the unpleasant trait of suspecting the motives of their opponents, have called the career men "pro-Fascist." Nothing could be more significant, therefore, than the sharp alteration of opinion among the career men. The President's de-nunciation of the current paroxysms of Nazi bestiality is a case in

Ill-informed persons, who think this country can be the world's moral mentor without assuming a mentor's responsibilities, glory in the President's defense of decency, without thinking through to the possible consequences. The career men, on the other hand, thoroughly understand that the President's words were a step toward intervention abroad. They see the chance that Ambassador Wilson and Ambassador Dieckhof, now both homeward bound, may never return to their respective posts. They know the meaning of a possible break in diplomatic relations. And they approve.

THE WORST IS WAR Opinion among the career men has changed for a simple reason. Before Munich, they and everyone else in the State Department clearly foresaw that economic conflict with Germany was inevitable. But they expected the conflict to end there, because, like everyone else, thought that the democratic nations of Europe were a first line of American defense. If Germany goes too far, they thought, she will have to fight England; England will win, perhaps with some assistance from us toward the close of the struggle, and that will virtually let us out.

Munich's meaning, as it has finally been digested, is that the supposed first line of defense just isn't there. There are certain possibilities, to be sure. The will and the power to resist may be stronger in Great Britain than it now seems. A vast eastern European empire has already been resigned to Germany, but half the empire remains to be conquered, and perhaps Germany will stumble in her march to the east. The process of subduing their new empires may also be too much for the German allies, Italy, and, even

But these are only possibilities. Meanwhile, besides the public difference on the Jewish question, this country is already involved in a bitter dispute with Germany over Brazilian trade. The prospect is for constantly worsening relations. And the United States must be prepared for the worst. One way of preparing for the worst-strengthening potential friends abroad-is repeal of the Spanish embargo and the mandatory clauses of the neutrality act. The State Department is likely to test the country's capacity for realistic thinking by asking for one or both of these when congress (Copyright, 1938, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

Nowhere but in Los Angeles ould Upton Sinclair, admitting his inability to conduct his own enterprises successfully, have gathered the nucleus of a following which seriously threatened an important state with an economic nallucination described by one of his trusted lieutenants as the revolving of wheels within wheels This was the plan by which a mar with an old windmill who needed pair of shoes and two pounds of stew meat traded the windmill to the owner of a gravel pit who traded gravel to a man buildng a concrete silo who gave him a calf whose hide became shoes on the feet and whose sinews became stew in the pot of the man whose necessities began the chain of transactions.

This, however, was a brief and simplified example of the commerce that was to have been imsed on California had the spirit of Los Angeles been elected.

In other cases the transforma tion of the second-hand windmill into shoes and stew would have ranged from end to end of the vast state—peaches for pork chops, mop-handles for chewing-gum, an axle for a saxophone lesson, and so forth, until hundreds of men had struck trades with others who miraculously happened to need exactly what was offered, and vice versa, and suddenly all settled down to the enjoyment of the things they needed most.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

A BIT OF THE PHARISEE There is, I imagine, a bit of the Pharisee in all of us. I refer especially to the Pharisee who, along with the Publican, went into a temple to pray. The Pharisee delivered himself as follows: "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust or even this Publican."

Now and then, as one ambles along life's highway, doing one's feeble best, there is encountered some rather onery specimens. So much so, as a matter of fact, that the Pharisee in one just will come out.

The Publican had the best argument. He beat his breast and said, "Lord, be merciful unto me, a sinner." But, even so, there are some people who just invite comparison.

What got me started on this line of thinking was a telephone call of a night ago. There was this voice on the telephone which wished to know why there had appeared in this space criticism of Germany and German methods toward a helpless minority. I explained to the gentleman that I could not understand a mind which approved of such tactics but that it was his own mind and far be it from me to seek to change it. He was one of those anyonymous callers. Probably one which thinks it reasonable to join such organizations as the Ku Klux Klan. There is no use trying to do anything with the owner of such a mind.

When he had hung up I heard the Pharisee shouting out that he was very happy indeed he did not have a mind such as that; one which could accept brutality and violence and all the crimes, mental and physical, which go with brutality and horror.

As a matter of fact, I had a terrible wrestle with the Pharisee and it was a dogfall. The Publican kept shouting, "Be merciful unto me, a sinner." But the Pharisee had a rather tough argument, He kept saying, "Honest, now, don't kid yourself. You are glad you haven't got a mind like that. Honest, now, don't kid yourself." The Publican sounded fainter and fainter. Maybe it wasn't even a dogfall. As a matter of fact, hours later when I went to sleep, the Pharisee had a hammerlock and was putting on pressure. THE MINDS OF CHILDREN I recall watching the demonpeople in Vienna last April. They were caught up with an enthusiasm for a government which burned books, which censored newspapers and magazines, which gave them only what they wished them to hear on the air; which taught them only what they wished them to know in school. They were learning not gentleness and kindness; not laughter and the pleasures of childhood; but songs about the beauty of steel trations by children and young and iron; the beauty of death and of war; they were learning cruelty The Pharisee came out again at that. I recalled back home the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; church organizations for young people; fresh air camps for the poor, and all the great field of work is open to assist the underpriveleged to become privileged, and I stood there and thanked God that sort of ideology had not come to America. That is one reason why censorship frightens me; one reason why I always will believe in education rather than in restriction; one reason why I believe legislated morality is impossible and that decency of thought and action may be obtained by education in the home and schools, and not by laws which restrict plays and books, which have merit and which are not deliberately bad. If a fifth of the money spent by the government and dry agencies during the prohibition farce had been spent on education, the result would have been effective and permanent. Education will solve most of the problems confronting us. DEMOCRACY'S JOB Meanwhile, none can deny that the blg job ahead for this country is to make it possible that those who have not are themselves able to have.

I talked a night or so ago with a cotton mill owner. Someone asked him, "If you had $500,000 to spend on the workers in your mill, what would you spend it on? Without hesitation he had answered:

"Education." Education is not, per se, an open sesame to all that is good, nor is it a synonym for prosperity. It is, however, the way to a better and easier solution of problems, social and economic. We need, of course, the classical preparation. But the great hope of the south is the vocational school. It does a tenant farmer no good at all to have his fields terraced if he does not understand why or the necessity for maintaining them. It does the mill worker no good at all to give him baths and sanitation if he does not understand the need or the use. Just how I arrived here after starting off with a telephone call, I am not quite sure. While beating the typewriter, it seemed co-herent. Oh, yes. The anonymous caller whose mind could approve inhumanity and horror, needs to be subjected to some pr education. Perhaps he is hopeless. There may be hope for his Long experience has shown that people are easier to control if kept in ignorance, for the truth makes men free. In other ages, when religion was the law, education was a mo-

They may begin to wonder and look for answers. Bright young minds may begin to think, and that leads to independence. Slavery is doomed when the slaves begin to ask why. The rulers of managed nations were shrewd enough to realize that nature will somehow fill a vacuum. They did not leave the heads of their people empty, but wisely filled them to overflowing with untruth disguised as truth. By shrewd and plausible propaganda, they taught their people all the facts and all the answers; and the people are satisfied and obedient because they don't realize that the facts and the answers are false. They have no way to learn the truth, for their masters control the public prints and the In America, where nobody is responsible for such matters, w

The result has been, since they have many different kinds of currencies, she has been able whenever she wanted to, to seek advantage, all of which has been done with the approval of German government itself. ## Is Woman's Problem

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: Under these circumstances what would you advise a woman to do? When I married my hus-band I didn't love him and don't now. He is twenty years older and for the last ten years hasn't been capable of providing a de-cent living for me and the two children. The catch comes in that he does love me, is good to me and consequently I have a certain sort of feeling for him which I hardly know how to characterize. I am now fortytwo, have no training in busi-ness and know that I couldn't make my own way in the world. This is what my head says; yet my heart replies: "Can you go on forever with nothing to make life worth living?"

MRS. R.

ANSWER:

Now see here, sister, starvation is a fearful thing whether of the heart or of the stomach. But how can you claim to be starved when you have two children and a de-voted husband? How can you claim that you have nothing to live for when you have two young 250 lives for whose future you are responsible? How can you complain that you haven't a thrilling romance when you deliberately chose to marry a man you didn't love? Why, you are like the prisoner who goes on a hunger strike because he doesn't like the dish set before him. If he starves it's 100 his own fault.

> Time was when you brushed aside the questions your heart asked you and used your head which apparently told you it was time to get married and that you'd better take the only man who offered. Then there's no inconsistency in skipping the heart questions a second time.

Your head tells you that a husband who loves you and is good to you deserves something than whimpers for youthful ro-mance. It tells you that having brought two children into the world, you haven't the moral right to separate them from their father merely because he doesn't set your pulse to racing when comes near. It tells you that the certain feeling which you have for the father of your children would keep you Firmness, elasticity, resiliency, your children would keep you to run tension, vigor, poise, fitness or from being happy were you to run out on him and break up his home.

Listening to your head you will have the answer to your heart's question; namely, that if you find some gainful employ-ment that will help your husband meet the bills, occupy your roving thoughts and insure some advantages to your children which the husband isn't competent to provide, you will have something worth while to live

Really it's not in the cards that a middle-aged married woman with an oldish husband and a couple of children should run into a hot untary and involuntary muscle is more or less controlled by the autonomic or "sympathetic" nervous a little more thought to making the properties of the control of the con her husband and children happy system. In the intestine, where the and less thought to her dangerous years vagaries which will be of short duration. It's a safe bet that she will find more solid satisfac-tion in unselfish devotion to her family than she would find in romantic interlude - which after causes contraction or increased tone of intestinal musculature, while stimulation of the splanchnic poetion inhibits.

MY DAY Roosevelts Pay Visit To Chicamauga Dam

By Eleanor Roosevelt.
ATLANTA, GA., ON BOARD THE PRESIDENT'S TRAIN-Once on the train yesterday afternoon in Washington, various and sundry officials crowded in to say good-bye to the President.

He will not see some of them again for some time, as, for instance, Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, who will go on a long journey, and carry heavy responsibility before we meet again in Washington. To one of his official family the

I could not help smiling when the official answered:

"Yes, I know, but I promise not to do so."

Then the train was off and everybody seemed to relax at once and become conscious of the weariness which they had not noticed, under the stress of last-minute excitements and prepara-

At 9:30 this morning we got out at Chatta-nooga, Tenn., to drive to the Chickamauga Dam. In the course of the drive we saw Lookout Mountain with all its historic memories, enjoyed the beautiful views, and the fine roads winding up the mountains and along the ridges, and finally we saw Judge Will Cumpings' farm. Cummings' farm.

From the point of view of conservation, this particular part of Tennessee is, perhaps, one of the most revealing places which I have visited in the country. Besides terracing and treating the soil, so that crops have a better chance of resisting periods of drouth, he is planting cover crops, raising cattle and sheep—in short, making use not only of all that TVA can do for him, but following the whole farm program and pointing with pride to fields whose top soil was rapidly being washed away and which are to-

Younger Set To Don Costumes From Land of Tulips and Windmills

Sigma Delta Club Will Honor New Members at Dutch Dance

By Sally Forth.

COLORFUL costumes from the land of windmills and tulips will be worn by a group of the younger set when the Sigma Delta Club entertains the freshmen members at its annual dance on December 2 at Garber Hall.

In addition to requiring the freshmen to wear costumes to the dance, the club members impose such a terrible restriction on new members as not allowing them to dance until after intermission. You can easily imagine the younger girls' ill-at-ease feeling as they sit on the sidelines and watch their sister members dancing to swing music and being rushed by handsome students of the college set. Although "the little Dutch girls," as new members are referred to, will have dates for the dance, they will not be allowed to accompany these young swains until after the magic hour of intermission. The girls will attend the dance with their sister members, but they

with their dates after the last strains of "Home, Sweet Home" are heard.

For instance, the buffet table in the dining room, which was covered with Venetian lace, was centered with a long-mirrored aisle outlined in small white candles and tiny white button chrysanthemums. A miniature bride and groom advanced down the aisle to meet the minister, who stood at one end before a minia-ture altar banked high with white button chrysanthemums. At either end of the table was a handsome silver candelabrum holding white tapers tied with fluffy white tulle bows,

The menu, cleverly arranged by the hostess, also bore bridal significance. The first course, a fruit cup, was listed as "The Bride's First Breakfast." This was followed by "The Love Bird," which was turkey; "The Groom's Bleeding Heart," which was cranberry jelly moulded in heart-shape, and "Logs for the Newlyweds' House," which was aspara-gus with hollandaise sauce.

The salad course, listed as "The Bride's Blushing Cheek," was a stuffed pear, delicately tinted to resemble the blush of youth. The dessert, called "Forbidden Fruit," was ice cream moulded in the shape of apples, and the accompanying cakes were heart-shaped. Coffee was

"Love's Nectar." Following supper, the guests wrote "poetical portraits" of each other, which were read aloud so that the identity of each might be guessed, "Honeymoon" bridge and an indoor treasure hunt were also features of entertainment.

FOR the first time in over five years the seven children of terson Trotti, beloved Atlantans, gathered for a reunion. Last week end the reunion assembled the sisters and brothers and their children who were guests on Saturday of Ernest Trotti, who entertained at dinner at his home on Sherwood road. His sister, Mrs. Frank McCormack, entertained the group on Sunday at a family dinner at her home on Angier avenue.

Because several members of the family live in distant parts, a week-end gathering was chosen for the reunion and the two dinner parties were an advance celebration of Thanksgiving.

The brothers and sisters who gathered with their families were Lamar Trotti, noted writer, who now lives in Hollywood and who brought his six-year-old son, Lamar Jr.; Mrs. C. J. Christensen, of Cleveland, Ohio, who was accompanied by Mr. Christensen; Clarence Trotti, of Asheville, N.

Miss Heyward is a member of the Debutante Club of Raleigh and made her formal bow to society there at a ball on September 9. She is a graduate of St. Mary's school in Raleigh and later attended Brenau College, where she was a member of the Phi Mu sorority. ## Largest Crowd Since 1931 Tulane Game Expected at Athens

There will be a lot of new prospects for strait jackets before the week is over if there is any serious tendency to take figures and try to arrive at some sane conclusion as to how Tech and Georgia are coming out Saturday afternoon at Athens.

You can sit down with the statistics and a pencil and figure out that Tech has done more of this and Georgia has done more or less of that. It's an interesting pastime. No question about

But as far as determining what will happen when Tech and Georgia meet the figures don't mean a thing. They never have and there is no good reason being advanced why they should this season.

Too many good Tech teams-and vice versahave come up to this game CERTAIN to win. And then something happened. The team that wasn't supposed to win either did or got a tie.

Often the annual game has swung on the unexpected brilliance of individuals. There was that game a year ago when crippled Bill Hartman had been moved to blocking back because he couldn't run the ball.

Bill Hartman took the opening kick-off of the second half and made a bee-line for the Tech goal line. He didn't deviate a foot in that scintillating run.

The result was a 6-6 tie for Georgia. Bill Hartman, who couldn't run, ran just enough to put Georgia back in the ball to Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, director of athletics, it said: game and keep them there. Past results and figures, taken by and large, are more useful to notice from the faculty of the able confusion. It also saves wear and tear on brain cells. A lot of folks have discovered that the best way to take the annual game is to go either to Grant field or Sanford stadium, quietly find one's seat, sit back and

The one safe bet each year is that, in the event of dry weather, the game will be highly interesting and that, regardless of weather conditions, there won't be many seats going begging. And speaking of seats, I have at hand a communication from F. M. Williams, who has done an excellent job in the publicity department this season.

Williams reports that there are some 3,000 reserved seats This has resulted from the turning back of some 2,000 tickets.

Williams adds that 5,000 general admission seats will be sold only the day of the game. They will be put on sale around 10 o'clock in the morning and will cost $1.50 each. Special high school tickets-1,500 of them-will be sold to kids under 18 for 40 cents

So there are some tickets left. But it doesn't pay to wait long to get them. It's a case of he who hesitates is lost.

COME TO THINK OF IT.

Come to think of it, this is to be the fifth game played in Athens since the stadium was dedicated. Tech has never won, never got a tie, in Sanford stadium.

This has been the only consistent thing about the series. But who can tell that this will continue to run true to form? Nothing else about the rivalry ever has.

In 1929, the year the stadium was dedicated, Georgia's Flaming Sophomores won, 12 to 6; in 1931, Georgia ran away with the annual contest, 35 to 6; in Georgia won, 7 to 0, and in 1936, the un dog Bulldogs tripped Tech, 16 to 6.

This state of affairs provides incentive for both teams. For Georgia it provides an incentive to keep the string unbroken. For Tech it offers an incentive to

Rating experts bravely pick Tech to win this year. But the experts don't know what they are letting themselves in for in being so positive about it. The rating experts have only their prestige at stake, however. They don't bet on their picks, I'll the Y. M. C. A. basketball

FRESHMEN ARE PREPARED.

The freshmen of Georgia Tech and Georgia, who annually ake the best plays of the varsity rivals and convert them to their own use, will run through the final practice today.

Tomorrow they'll meet at Grant field in the annual Thanksgiving Day game for the benefit of the crippled children of the

The freshmen have a wide variety of plays. Each week during the season, they learn a new set of plays to run against the varsity. They learn the plays of Auburn, Notre Dame, Alabama, Holy Cross, Mercer, Tulane, Duke, and so on.

They know the Warner system. They are very familiar with the Notre Dame. To the freshmen gridders, variety of plays is the spice of their football life.

They love to experiment. For, while the coaches take them and drill them in the Tech and Georgia systems of play, it is not easy to forget the other plays they have learned each week. Another beauty about this game is that neither knows what to expect. They don't scout each other.

The best thing to expect is the unexpected. Like last year, for instance, when Joe Bartlett, who wasn't a back at all, ran wild against the Bullpups.

A lot of times in the past folks have bought tickets for the freshman game and gave them away because they figured it wasn't worth seeing. They bought the tickets as a charity proposition.

In staying away, they missed a lot of football. It's the biggest dollar's worth of football anyone could ever hope to see. Coach Howell Hollis is on record that the Bullpups re going to win. Norris Dean, coach of the Baby Jackets, isn't talking. Maybe he doesn't want to put the whammy on his unbeaten charges. At any rate, win, lose or draw, the game will be worth the money strictly as a game. And every cent of the proceeds goes to a most deserving cause.

BROWN, THE BOMBER, RETURNS.

Ben Brown, the bomber, whose last appearance in Atlanta saw him kicking the Chinaman Chong around, meets Tommy Beck, a clever middleweight, tonight at Warren arena. Beck defeated Brown a couple of years ago and Ben, the bomber, hopes to even that score tonight. He has evened a lot of old hopes to even that score tonight. He has evened a lot of old scores in the past year and a half. In fact, the hard-hitting Atlanta middleweight, who has improved greatly in the past eight months, should be ranked very highly nationally because are on the Drake University football schedule for next season. The schedule includes Miami at Coral Gables, Fla., night of November lof his impressive showing.

T.C.U., DUKE, VOLS, HERE'S ONE WORTH 2 IN BUSH ATLANTA PREPS Ben Brown Will Fight FOOTBALL FIGHT Tommy Beck Tonight

"I beat him once. I can do it again." There you have the short and none too sweet pre-fight state-ments of Atlanta's Ben Brown and Tommy Beck, Baltimore warrior, who will slug it out over the 10-round route at Warren arena tonight. Brown dropped a close decision to Beck more than two years ago at Baltimore. He ex-pects to avenge that defeat by knocking out the Marylander tonight.

Ben has won seven of his last eight fights by knockouts. He is campaigning for a high ranking in the middleweight class, hoping to land a title bout next summer. Ben has won return bouts from Battling Burroughs, Babe Risko and Ralph Chong, knocking out the last two named. He believes he has improved sufficiently during the past year to win a quick and smashing victory tonight. Both fighters will weigh close to the 162-pound mark. Brown is 21 and Beck, who has

STOCK OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—The market will probably remain quiet until after the Thanksgiving holiday.

BEER & CO.—The persistent weakness of sterling and the disturbed French internal situation are causing some worry and in view of Thursday's closing of the exchange a little so-called "Pre-Holiday" selling might reasonably be indulged in.

FENNER & BEANE—Our opinion is unchanged. The reaction appears to be in the process of flattening out and we believe the current dull period will be followed by higher prices.

COURTS & CO.—Strength in the near months seems likely to continue until a point is reached which will attract freer offerings into trade channels.

BEER & CO.—We favor buying May.

July and October cotten.

GRAIN OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—Primary receipts dropped off sharply Tuesday, and with lack of pressure on the market we look for a strengthening of price.

BEER & CO.—With carrying charges it is a handicap to bullish operations and while there is no trend at the moment we believe after Argentine wheat starts moving in volume lower prices will be seen.

FENNER & BEANE—Still regard market in an accumulating range, meaning ket in an accumulating range, meaning a market to point definitely higher later on, but swinging temporarily without much character.

Julius Kessler Tells of Founding Fortune on Thirst of Leadville Miners.

Forty flop-eared donkeys carried five-gallon kegs of whisky from Denver to the thirsty miners of Leadville to found the fortune of Julius Kessler. "That's how I made my first million," he said. Kessler was in Atlanta yesterday shaking hands and radiating good will and vigor. President of a large distilling company, he is making a tour of his wholesale and retail outlets.

How many more millions he had made he wouldn't say. His reply to that was "I still have my

A living refutation of those who say good living will bring one to an early grave, Kessler smokes 12 to 15 cigars a day, takes his fun where he finds it, and drinks when he wishes . . . but in modera-tion. He speaks of a recent examination at Mayo clinic, when doctors told him he had the arteries of a 24-year-old man and the heart of an 18-year-old girl.

Kessler came to America 65 years ago from his native Hun-gary. No ordinary immigrant, he came first-class. After a short stay n Cincinnati ne went to Omaha and tried to enlist in the war against Sioux Indians. When he was turned down, because of his youth, he moved on to Denver, and began to build a fortune. Those were the wild old days of the west when millions were made and lost overnight, and he knew well many of the characters that made the period the most colorful in American history. Once the "Octopus."

Kessler succeeded so admirably, he said, that when prohibition 000,000 whisky combine, and was dential elections November 28.
